I don't know what to do.
I keep trying to be kind but everyone calls me names!

When I say that migrants would be so much happier if they could stay in their own countries, as long as the poverty, economic collapse and military disasters could be stopped...

When I say that kids shouldn't have been given any mRNA vaccines, because they weren't proven safe, and children were not at risk. Then, when I point out that now so many more kids have become immunocompromised as a result...

When I say that babies should have the right to be born, instead of being killed inside their mothers, or that people with mental health conditions should have the right to care and treatment, instead of being MAIDed...

Or if I say that so many lives could be saved if we went back to the SAY NO TO DRUGS programs instead of handing out so-called "safe" supply to young people...

When I talk about the insane profits gender surgeons make, about how those surgeries are irreversible, and I mention the depression of kids who wish they could detransition after being harmed by hormone pills, and who regret their choices but can't reverse them...

And then, if I dare get on the topic of young people conscripted into their country's armies, forced to fight and die in endless wars, and if I say we should push for cease fires & peace negotiation, even if that means not getting the lands & resources the leaders want...

I just don't know what to do...
